Pheasants Roosting. Apart from the beautiful plumage, especially of the male, pheasants are characterised by the long and wedge shaped tail, the spurred legs, and the long feathers from the sides of the head. The eggs are laid in April and number from ten to fourteen, of an olive-brown, or occasionally of a pale-blue colour. Probably no country in the world contains, for its size, so many pheasants as England.

*I have been brighter
today with some
sun. but very cold. Hope you are well. Remind
me to write
J.*
